Dear Game Informer:

First off, I'd like to say your magazine is great! I really enjoy the reviews because they are opinions from different people instead of from the same person each time. Your magazine should be bigger. Otherwise it's great, don't change it.

Dean Whitehead Helena, MT

By far, my favorite game for the Genesis is Sonic the Hedgehog. I have beat the game, but still play it. It's just as fun as when I first bought it. I also have a Nintendo, but there's no comparison between the two systems. Sonic's the best game I've ever played. I just wanted to thank you for sending me your magazine.

Corey Cohen New York, NY

We enjoy hearing about your favorite games. Corey also included a stage select for Sonic. However, we have received so many copies of that tip that we could not print it. Thank you, anyway. - Ed.

Your magazine is great! I love the tips for all the video game systems. Your tips work better than GamePro's! I mean it! And tell Ed, Marianne, Rick and Andy to keep up the good work!

Nick Rusakowicz Yorktown Hts, NY

When I received my first issue of Game Informer I thought, "What a relief. Finally an unbiased video game magazine." The reviews are complete and in-depth. Keep up the good work!

Tim Wright Richmond, VA

Thanks for the vote of confidence, Tim. We've got the Game Consultants very busy working to bring you more reviews for the next issue. - Ed. I was reading in the December '91 issue of Game Informer that one girl suggested Fun Club membership cards. I think that is a good idea. I've bought games from your company and they're great! Please inform me if Funco decides to make membership cards. I would like to have one. I think the Game Informer is a great magazine for people who love video games.

Ki Choi West Covina, CA

Ki, sorry but there are no immediate plans for membership cards, but we'll keep you posted. - Ed.

I am writing to you about the Nov/ Dec issue of Game Informer. I saw that it had the game Micro Machines on the back cover. But, when I opened it, I was disappointed to see that you never talked about it in the issue.

> Mark Aust Estherville, IA

The back cover of the Nov/Dec issue was a Micro Machines ad, paid for by Camerica. The advertising in Game Informer has no influence on the editorial content of the magazine. However, we featured Micro Machines in our premier issue, back in September of '91. I will mail you a back issue and thank you for writing. (We apologize for misspelling Estherville in the last issue.) - Ed.

I really like the Game Informer Magazine you sent me. Most of the time I just get a flyer, so this was a great surprise. I enjoyed the nice puzzle and great tips. Thank you, a Fun Club fan.

ROM. We also delve into the world of the Super Nintendo system.

Finally, we need your help. We met so many important and informative people at the Consumer Electronics Show, like the CEOs of many licensees. We got to wondering what you, the game player, would ask them if you had the chance. Game Informer would like to give you that opportunity. Please send in your questions and we'll go straight to the source for the answers by interviewing them for you.

Thanks again for all the letters. We're waiting to hear from you!

GAMETEK'S INFOGENIUS SYSTEM: LET YOUR FINGERS DO THE WALKING...

Thanks to today's technology, the world gets smaller and the pace of society gets faster. We have become a very transient bunch of people. Just stop by the nearest airport or train station and you'll see more students and business people on the go than ever before.

And with all the hustle and bustle comes all the hassles of travel. You need a quick way to find out where to stay; where to go and what to do. How do you convert dollars into the national currency? How many miles is it to the next town if it's 23 kilometers? And how do you ask a simple question if you don't speak the local language?

Whether it's traveling for business, school or pleasure, Gametek has discovered a new way to put the ease back into globe trotting. Their InfoGenius system puts all the answers right in the palm of your hand. InfoGenius provides a quick way to use your Game Boy as a time saving reference tool. Plus it gives you a great excuse to bring your favorite hand held along for the ride!

Gametek, a leading developer of computer and video software, first introduced the InfoGenius System in 1991. The American Heritage Spell Checker, the InfoGenius Personal Organizer and Frommer's™ Travel Guide were just the beginning of a good thing. Based on licensing agreements with some of the best known reference sources like the American Heritage Dictionary, Frommer's Travel Guides and Berlitz Language Translators. Gametek was able to expand the line to include Berlitz Spanish/English and French/English translators. New additions to the line are the Berlitz Japanese/English and German/English translators. These will be available in April of this year.

The InfoGenius Personal Organizer helps any student or busy executive keep track of their schedule and remember special dates. There is even a place for important addresses and phone numbers. The American Heritage Spell Checker allows the user to enter a common misspelling and it provides the correct spellings of possible word selections.

The Frommer's Travel Guide lets you select your destination and it will give you a list of hotels, places to eat, 'must see sites' and a short history of the area. The Berlitz language translators are divided into categories such as restaurants, hotels and shopping. There is a metric/currency converter and 300 common, travel-related phrases. These translators are also capable of spelling more than 12,000 words, either from English to a foreign language or vice versa.

So whether you need to find your way to the nearest embassy or order coffee with your dessert, the InfoGenius System makes it easy by putting the answer at your fingertips; all for around forty dollars a piece. And after you and your Game Boy have put in a long day of work, kick back and relax with your favorite portable game cart.

PC's Wackiest Characters Finally Make It to Video!

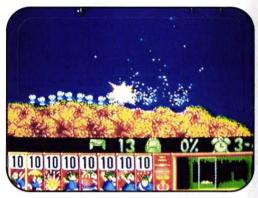

"Adorable vet incredibly stupid, furry creatures. Without your help, they have no chance for survival." This definition may make you think of your pet, your kids, maybe even a friend or two, but what it best describes are the title characters of a new game by Sunsoft for SNES. Lemmings is just one of the newest carts to make the transfer from PC to the world of video games.

From the time you pop this game in, you'll be faced with obstacle courses and rough terrain through which you must guide our friends. But while they may lack brain power, they do possess special skills or tasks. It's your job to assign these tasks in order to save the most Lemmings. Otherwise they might just walk off a cliff into boiling molten lava, or trip up a Lemming trap.

These irresistible nitwits can become Blockers, saving their buddies from danger, but be warned that Blockers must be sacrificed before a round can be completed. Lemmings can become Diggers, Bashers or Miners to get through many road blocks, although not all substances can be penetrated. Floaters use umbrellas to drift down to safety; Builders can make stairways and Climbers walk up any vertical surface. Then there are the Bombers who explode, taking out items around them. In addition, Lemmings can become Ath-

Concept:

Get ready for a game that is different from all others. Lemmings is an adventure/puzzle. If you like a game in which you have to think fast, this is one not to be passed by.

Graphics

& Animation:

These little creatures are so cute, yet so dumb that you have to tell them everything to do (sounds a bit like your children, right?). From the beginning title screen to the actual game play, the movement of the characters and scenery are hypnotic.

Sound:

The background music is made up of some familiar tunes with a bouncy twist. After a while you won't even notice that the sound changes with each character or the funny use of Lemmings voice overs.

Playability:

You start out with three or four easy levels that can be bypassed by a password feature. Then watch out. You no longer get help or suggestions from the computer and you are on your own. I found myself pausing the game to organize my strategy, all in the name of saving fuzzy, little Lemmings from walking off an edge or burning themselves up.

letes, Jumpers, Flippers and Wavers, but you'll just have to play the game to discover what they can do.

There are all sorts of variables that will keep you on your toes. You must save a certain percentage of these fuzzy, little guys in order to progress to the next level. This percentage will change, as will the number of Lemmings marching through each course and the rate at which they are dropped. You will also be limited as to the number of Lemmings that can be assigned a given skill.

The levels start out fairly easy, with a small number of Lemmings dropping from the trap door to travel through a simple course. The screen gives you hints as to which tasks you should select, or limits you to one or two skills. But don't think this game is a push over. There are 125 different levels in the one player mode, each increasingly more difficult than the one before. A password feature allows you to skip over the levels you have already completed. If 125 different courses aren't enough, there are four levels of difficulty, ranging from Fun, Tricky, Taxing to Mayhem.

This puzzle game is so much fun that you'll want to share it with a friend, and you can. The two player mode gives you a split screen so that each player can view the field from their own perspective. Player one must lead the

The idea of a whole game created around saving hundreds of little Lemmings from killing themselves is absurd, so of course I liked it.

The Lemmings grab their heads just before they explode, tapping their feet as they block the path to sure death. The animation is superb, as well as the sheer number of characters on the screen. However, the overall graphics of the backgrounds are only mediocre.

The music is great, as well as the voice overs and sound effects. My favorite part is when you nuke all the Lemmings at the same time and it counts down until they all blow up.

Playability:

It plays pretty much like the computer version, without the convenience of a mouse. You assign certain Lemmings the task of controlling the masses, whether it's blowing up or building a stairway. But if you think it sounds easy, try the 'Mayhem' level

In the video game world just as in the movies, there has always been a stigma about sequels. Can they live up to the reputation of the original? Is there really enough room for improvement to make much of a difference? Does anybody really want a second edition, anyway?

John Madden '92:

In the case of John Madden Football '92, the newest pigskin release for Genesis from Electronic Arts, there is strong proof that 'sequel' spells new and improved.

So, what is the recipe for sequel success? First, you start with one of the most popular football carts for the Genesis format. Actual teams and real player stats are imperative to this mixture. Then put in more plays, more formations and more defensive moves. You add cinema graphics for more realistic coaching and crowd scenes. Mix in features like instant replay and frame-by-frame reviews. Finally, throw in a few special items like weather conditions, stadium select, injury segments and an 'All-Madden' team. With these ingredients, it's sure to be a hit!

Your first move is to set up the game. If you would like to watch a run-through to get a feel for the game, select the Demo mode to watch Buffalo and New York duke it out. If you just can't wait to get into the action, simply hit the start button to control the New York -Buffalo clash. Otherwise, select the home and away teams from twentyeight actual teams or the All-Madden team.

You control most aspects of this game. Play in the one or two-player modes. In the two-player option, you can face off with a friend or work together as teammates against the computer. Pick pre-season and play without penalties. Go for regular season and all the rules apply. There are also play-offs and the initial match-ups will be provided by the computer. You can also control the length of the quarters, choosing between five, ten and fifteen minutes. Choose an open or domed stadium. If open is your choice, then you can select the type of weather conditions you'll play in.

Now let's play ball! It's the kick off, the ball soars down the field, your man receives the ball and runs like lightening; and it's a first down on the 35 yard line. Now if your team is running an offensive play, you'll want to take advantage of your players' strengths. As the Quarterback, you'll call a Set, Formation and Play. Hit button 'C' three times to call the play Coach Madden suggests or select your own from his playbook. Here you'll find actual moves such as the 'Fast', 'Hands', 'Shotgun', 'Run & Shoot', the 'Cut' and the 'Trap'. If you're a veteran of the first Madden, be forewarned. You won't be able to call the same plays over and over this time. Your opponent is on to you this time and will nail you to the wall.

If your team kicks off, be sure to

Joe Montana 2: Sports Talk Football This Game Really Speaks To You!

You get yourself comfortable in your favorite chair; a big bowl of popcorn, a bag of chips and your beverage of choice are all close at hand. You smile in anticipation with the thought of what's about to come alive on your television screen. The familiar celebrity faces. The bone crunching, grid iron action. And the voice of the announcer, putting all of his insight and knowledge into the play by play.

Monday Night Football, right? Think again. What you see before you is the latest in hot sports action from Sega Genesis. What you hold in your hand is Joe Montana 2: Sports Talk Football; the first football game for Genesis to feature complete play-by- play dialogue just like the real thing. Sports Talk Football picks up where the first Joe Montana cart left off, and then runs with the ball iust as far as it can.

Pigskin enthusiasts will find everything they've been looking for in this cart. Sports Talk features a 28 team line up, with an additional all-pro and dream Zoom in during the pass.

team select. Pick the home and visiting teams via the locker room, and you're on your way. But do the choices stop there? No way! What kind of weather conditions would you care to play in; fair, rain or snow? Select the length of the play periods from 20, 40 or 60 minutes. Would you rather play exhibition or league?

Anyone can play Sports Talk with its three levels of difficulty. The beginner level will show you the play and formation the computer is using; the normal mode gives you just the formation, and the difficult leaves you on your own.

Review your moves with the instant replay.

The viewing perspective is horizontal, side scrolling. But here's where it gets really good. Sports Talk offers a zoom view select that will close in on the ball as it changes hands. This gives players a scaling effect they thought was only possible on SNES. And, if you really bust a move, see it again with the instant replay. The new cinema display will give you a good view of the ref as he makes his calls, or the crowd as they cheer you on. And stick around for the halftime show. Our sportscaster has his own "talk" show, updating us on the first half statistics and detailing the players.

There are more than forty offensive plays you can select from, as well as 18 defensive moves right out of Joe's playbook. Rumors and News From the Video Game World Acclaim Entertainment, the Nintendo and Game Boy licensee known for it's popular conversions of Williams/Bally/Midway coin-op hits, will soon try their hand at the 16-bit format. Acclaim announced their agreement with Sega of America to begin marketing and distributing software for Sega's Genesis and the hand held Game Gear systems.

Acclaim unveiled its first Sega products at the January Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas, and they expect to have their first Genesis and Game Gear titles on the market this spring. This is made possible through Acclaim's acquisition of the Euporean company, Mirrorsoft LTD. and its U.S. subsidiary, Arena Entertainment. Look for Aliens 3 to be one of the first titles to come out of this alliance.

America's Favorite Plumbers Are At It Again

Rumor has it that there is a new Mario coming on the scene for you die-hard 8-bit Nintendo fans. We've heard whisperings that Super Mario 4 for the original NES system will be out sometime in 1992. No confirmation from Nintendo yet, but we'll keep our ears open.

Nintendo Joins the Race For CD-ROM

Nintendo of America used the stage of the January Consumer Electronics Show to announce its plans to release a Compact Disc (CD-ROM) for the Super Nintendo system by January of 1993. Thay plan to use the CD-ROM XA technology developed by Philips Consumer Electronics. The discs would work on the SNES CD only, but plans to use a bridge format, making them compatible with Philips CD Interactive (CDI) System is in the works.

One Possible Solution...

For those of you who are having trouble getting certain games to play on your new Genesis, many readers wrote in with a possible solution. They recommend putting in a cart that does work and removing it without shutting of the system. Then place the cart you're having difficulty with into the deck while it's still on. Due to the warning in the Genesis system manuel that states that this procedure may damage your system, we cannot recommend this as the best solution.

Accolade/Ballistic Takes on Sega

Last Fall found Sega of America facing off against Accolade in a trademark infringement suit. Accolade has answered that suit by filing one of their own.

It all began when Accolade, a leading developer and marketer of entertainment software for Nintendo, NEC and the IBM, Macintosh and Amiga computers, found a way to develop and manufacture Genesis compatible software without the assistance of Sega.

Sega retaliated by modifying the Genesis system slightly with an automatic message which states that all compatible game cartridges are 'Produced By or Under License from Sega Enterprises, Ltd.' The first of these updated decks was shipped in September of 1991.

The counter-suit from Accolade states that this message is untrue and unfair by leading consumers to believe that Sega, not Accolade, is responsible for the creation of the Ballistic software. The suit also seeks recovery for restraint of trade, trademark infringement and unfair business practices.

Accolade alleges that since they began creating Genesis compatible software, Sega has pressured retailers and distributors against purchasing video carts from Accolade. The allegations go on to charge that Sega has also pressured companies that supply Accolade, resulting in a temporary halt in deliveries from Fujitsu and NEC, two of the semiconductor manufacturers that supply Accolade with ROM components. Accolade, currently the only independent creator of Genesis-compatible game carts, also claims that Sega has pressures members in the area of game development against doing business with Accolade.

Alan Miller, chairman and chief executive officer of Accolade, argues that the Ballistic carts are not in violation of any intellectual property rights of Sega or its third party licensees. "

"Accolade will continue to develop, manufacture, and sell its products in the tradition of American independence and free enterprise," Miller concluded.

Sega could not be reached for comment.

Put The Power In Your Hands With Shatterhand!

Let me take you back to the 1970s. You and your family were sitting around the television after dinner, just waiting for the next episode of "The $6 Million Man". The title character was a heroic pilot pulled from sure death in a tragic air crash. His limbs, beyond repair, were replaced with cybernetic prosthetics that gave him some exceptional powers with which to conquer the evil forces of the world. What kid didn't dream of sporting their own prosthetics, making them capable of superhuman strength? Shatterhand, new from Jaleco for your Nintendo system, makes all those dreams come true.

The year is 2030 and the replacement of missing limbs with cybernetic devices is a medical reality. Working on a top secret military project, a group of these scientists have developed military uses for this technology. But as with any good vs. evil battle, power has gone to the heads of a small portion of these medical minds. Under the leadership of General Grover they secretly create an army of cyborg soldiers, known as the Metal Command, to carry out their plans of world domination.

A Law and Order Regulatory Division (L.O.R.D.) is formed to fight the Metal Command. They have developed a special pair of cyborg hands capable of shattering metal; the strongest hands in the world. Now they just need to find a willing recipient.

Enter the ambitious Bronx police officer, Steve Hermann. During an altercation with a couple of Metal Command's cyborgs, Steve is left for dead with crushed ribs and splintered hands. You can guess the rest. L.O.R.D. now has a recipient that not only qualifies for the transplant, but has the personal motivation to get the job done. As 'Shatterhand', Steve has one assignment; to battle and defeat the Metal Command and their mechanized troops.

In your quest to seek and destroy General Grover, you must defeat hordes of cyborg and biomechanical enemies, with your punch as your primary instrument of attack and defense. You will also be aided by eight satellite robots that fly above you. You obtain these helpers by collecting various combinations of 'alpha-beta' letters. Each robot features a different weapon, ranging from bouncing balls to laser beams to grenades. When you collect identical combinations of letters you gain temporary invincibility. Be sure to collect all the gold coins along the route, as the powerups you find will cost you.

Your search for General Grover will take Shatterhand through the Refinery, Filtration Plant, Submarine, Ravaged City, Anti-Gravity Research Center and finally to the Missile Command area for the final showdown. Each of these seven stages is comprised of two levels, for fourteen action-packed confrontations and hours of metal-crushing fun, while you clean up the streets of New York. If Robocop is right up your alley, try your hand at Shatterhand.

Beware the cyborg enemies.

Game Boy's Faceball 2000 In Your Face!

Remember the big, yellow, smiley faces of the 1970s that popped up everywhere sporting the slogan, "Have a nice day!"? Remember how irritating they could be? Here comes your opportunity to wipe the smile right off their faces.

This new Game Boy cart from Bullet Proof Software gives us something completely different. Imagine a combination of tag and splat ball; all surrounded by a world of 3-D mazes, viewed from the first person perspective. And if that's not enough, imagine so many options, it's like having several different games in a single cart. This is Faceball 2000.

In Faceball, you enter a computer generated world in the form of a Holographically Assisted Physical Pattern Yeilded For Active Computerized Embarkment (HAPPYFACE). Your mission: to work your way through the mazes without getting killed. As this smiling ball you can go it alone, team up with, or go against one to four friends. Break into smaller teams for one on two or two on two.

Once you have picked from one of four faces you must decide which type of game you wish to play, Arena or Cyberscape. Whichever style of play you choose, you can set the level of difficulty from six presettings: Very easy, easy, average, hard, very hard, and radical. If those aren't tough enough for you, try the custom level and design your own combination of opponents. Be careful, Smiloids come in many shapes, each with their own strengths and weaknesses. Within the walls of these mazes you'll encounter 'SHOOTME', 'ISHOOTTU', "TURKEYS', 'GREMLINS' and "BOUNCERS', just to name a few.

Arena-style play allows you to compete against other players or the computer's Smiloids in the maze of your choice. You can work alone or break down into teams against the computer controlled faces. Or have a blast battling against each other in a chaotic freefor-all. The first player to make ten tags wins.

Cyberscape play can best be described as a computer generated obstacle course; full of secret doors, pods full of clues, prizes and power-ups, hidden warp zones and, of course, an army of Smiloids. Here you'll find more than seventy levels to challenge your intellect and reflexes. Find the exit door to each maze in order to continue to the next level. This may be easier said than done, as doors can be disguised to look like walls, become invisible, or may be unstable and warp you deeper within the maze. Defeat these and face the Master Smiloid, but all this must be done against the clock that is counting down your time. You can go it alone or get a little help from your friends with the multiple player hook up.

So you think you can handle it? This cart will have you jumping right out of your chair and into the action. With Faceball 2000, the choices are endless. The only thing that's sure is you won't be able to put it down. But since it's on Game Boy, you won't have to! One more thing: Have a Nice Day!

Nintendo's 16-Bit System: What Puts The "Super" In The New NES?

Last June, a new 16-bit system was introduced into the gaming world, joining the company of NEC's Turbo Grafix-16 and Sega's Genesis system. The long awaited Super Nintendo System, U.S. version of the Super Famicom, was finally here. And, with its introduction came the most frequently asked question: What makes one system better than the other? Each have their strengths and weaknesses because every processor functions in a slightly different way. We found the answers to that question as numerous and varied as the video enthusiasts that play them. It seems to be a matter of personal taste for each individual.

We took a look at the newest 'kid on the block' to see what makes it tick. What is it about this most recent generation of the Nintendo family that spurred more than two million gamers to purchase the system in its first four months on the market?

It could be the central processing unit that makes up the SNES. This is the area of the system that reacts to the data it reads on the game cart you insert, and manipulates that data depending on the instructions you enter with the controller. The CPU of the SNES is akin to those found in the Apple IIgs line of personal computers. It is capable of manipulating data at a speed of 3.58 Megahertz (MHz) or 3,580,000 cycles per second. What does that mean in plain English? The Super Nintendo is capable of more color, clearer sound, greater levels of game play, all at a faster speed than any Nintendo before it.

Like all other video game systems, the memory of the SNES is divided into two types; RAM or 'Random Access Memory', and ROM or 'Read Only Memory'. The RAM is the area that is used for short-term memory, or the information and data to be manipulated that you control with the joypad. This is the section of memory that is erased once you shut your system off. The 'Read Only' or ROM is the area of memory that cannot be altered or erased.

RAM is expressed in terms of kilobytes or thousands of bytes of information. If you are confused about the difference between bits and bytes, just remember that eight bits equals one byte. The Super Nintendo boasts 128k of DRAM or 'Dynamic Random Access Memory'. The DRAM is divided into two areas of 64k that can be read or processed at three varying speeds; slow, medium and fast. However, of all the available RAM, only half can run at full speed at any given time. This explains the slight slow down experienced with some very intricate games. In addition to the 128k of DRAM there is 64k of VRAM or 'Video Random Access Memory'. The VRAM is the area of memory that serves the graphic processor and controls the picture you see on your screen.

Similar to the RAM, ROM can be operated at three different speeds and functions much in the same way. But remember that this is 'Read Only' memory and makes up the permanent features of a program or game. And, unlike the RAM, ROM is usually expressed in terms of megabits or millionbits, rather than kilobytes. To calculate how many kilobytes that is, you must first know that there are 1,048,578,576 bits to a megabit and that one byte is equal to eight bits. You figure it out!

One of the Super Nintendo's most impressive features is its graphics processor. The SNES is capable of a 32,768 color palette and can display anywhere from 16 to 240 at the same time. Compare that to the 516 color palette of its competitors. And, the 64k of VRAM allows for better resolution (the number of pixels displayed vertically and horizontally on the screen). That means bigger, brighter characters across your screen.

Okay, for those of you who are new to this, the characters on your screen are made up of pixels; dots of color on your screen. SNES is capable of screens made of up to 57,344 pixels at one time. These pixels cannot be moved individually, so they are grouped into 'tiles' of eight pixels by eight pixels, or one byte of information. There are four levels of tiles or bit planes stacked on top of one another to create each tile, which allow for a selection of 16 colors for each tile.

Now, to confuse things further. Pixels or tiles make up the 'sprites' that appear as the moving objects on your screen. The Super NES can display four different sizes of sprites: eight pixels by eight, 16 x 16, 32 x 32 and 64 x 64.

Larger characters are made by grouping sprites together. The limitation of the SNES is that it can only display 256 pixels of sprite data at one time. More than that and the processor overloads, causing that annoying flicker you experienced gamers dislike so much. This is because sprites are actually dropping off your screen.

The graphic feature that seems to be gathering the most praise is Mode 7, a programming feature that allows background graphics to be rotated and scaled in size. When you see sprites appear to become smaller and larger it is actually the backgrounds changing size to give that effect. Nintendo's programmers have also discovered a way to create depth to the backgrounds by scrolling two or more backgrounds at different speeds.

The system that's a feast for the eyes is also a treat to the ears. Nintendo had you audiophiles in mind when they gave the SNES a 16-bit Sony sound chip. The Super NES gives you eight stereo sound channels. The sound you hear is actually made up of 'sampled' sound, or little snips of real world sound. Because sampled sound requires a lot of memory, they have built in variable sampling rates ranging from 6 to 48kHz. The higher the rate, the more realistic the sound. The average cart sound is found in the 10 to 12kHz region. This advanced type of sound processing is new to the 16-bit system market.

If software and accessories are the key to your heart, Super Nintendo has vour number. Nintendo introduced several hits before the Christmas season. These included the popular flight simulation cart, Pilotwings, and the space age, race game, F-Zero. The PC hit SimCity was released along with the arcade smash, Final Fight. Nintendo has announced its plans to release more than 120 new titles for the Super NES in the first half of 1992. They also introduced the first accessory for the SNES at the January CES. The Super Scope 6 is an infrared firing device that allows you to aim and shoot from anywhere in the room. It comes with a new six-in-one cart that features games from the Blastris and Lazerblazer series.

So, while the verdict is still out on the best 16-bit system, Nintendo has provided several great reasons to take a good, hard look at the Super Nintendo System.

You've just spent the last hour and a half sitting on the freeway during rush hour. Some geek rear-ended you when he was following too close and traffic came to a halt; you got behind a car full of women doing 40 miles per hour 'cuz they were more interested in gabbing than driving; after sitting in bumper-to-bumper traffic through road construction, some idiot raced up the closed lane and cut you off just in front of the barricade; and just as you rounded the corner of your block, you got nailed with a ticket for not coming to a complete stop. You are not a happy camper!

If traffic, road construction, winter driving and stupid people with licenses have you down, Interplay has come out with the perfect remedy for the Super Nintendo: Radical Psycho Machine Racing (RPM Racing).

This game is like no other racing cart before its time. You can drive as fast as you like without ever getting a ticket. You can totally design both your track and the car that you race with. But the best part is bumping your competition off the road by using every weapon and dirty trick in the book. This revenge is truly sweet!

RPM Racing features 24 levels of competition, each with between two and eight different tracks. This game has something for racers with any amount of skill. But if that's not enough, there is a custom mode that allows you to design your own tracks complete with jumps, ramps, intersections, ice patches... you name it!

Race against the computer. Or add a friend with the two player option and watch things really get interesting. A split screen allows you to track the computer operated cars, or gives both players a perspective from their own spot on the track.

But now let's look at what this game is really about. We all love the demolition derby and the monster truck rallies. Why? We just love all those crashes! And this game is full of them. Aside from the sharp turns, ice patches and oil slicks, you can equip your racing machine with Nitro Glycerin, land mines and a host of other nasty toys. Tailgating should be done at your own risk!

You begin the game with enough money to buy a basic vehicle and pay the entrance fee to the first race. The top two finishers will be awarded big money that can be used to purchase meaner machines, custom parts and pay the steeper licensing and entrance fees of the upper level races. If you don't finish in first or second place, you can repeat a level or drop back to a lower track and earn enough money to advance. If money gets really tight, you can always return to the auto body shop and sell back parts for half of what you paid for them.

Demolish the competition with land mines,

This cart will take some practice and strategy but, luckily for you, there is a game save feature. Get to know your tracks and your vehicles well because there is a damage meter. When you car hits zero, you had better have a fire extinguisher handy!

So the next time everyday driving gets to you, get Radical Psycho Machine Racing from Interplay; getting behind the wheel may never be the same.

Wonder Boy in Monster World: The "Sega" Continues, This Time on Genesis

Owners of the Sega Master are no stranger to the cute, but courageous character known as Wonder Boy. For his third adventure, he has made the journey to the Genesis system.

Wonder Boy has set out once again to rescue the Princess, who is being held prisoner in the castle. But it's not a simple matter of scaling the fortress walls to save her. Our hero must journey through a dark and mysterious land known as Biomecha. This place is full of ghoulish characters and dragons, hence the title, "Monster World."

Fortunately, you are not completely on your own. Along the way Wonder Boy encounters friends and townspeople who stop to chat awhile. These conversations could be lifesaving, because they will give him clues as to where his enemies are hiding and how to obtain the magical powers and weapons needed to defeat them. Not all of these allies will be easy to spot. You will have to find secret passages and doors to discover where they are hiding.

There are enough exciting settings in this game to please any veteran gamer's eye. You begin in Wonder Boy's cottage in the forest. If you can find your way out of there, you will journey on into a series of dark caverns, sinister castles and challenging strongholds. As you wind your way through, you will pick up various weapons that will alter your powers and the course of your adventure. Search for secret entrances that obscure rooms full of hidden treasures and valuable power ups. Collect gold and magic that will come in handy to purchase additional weapons, procure valuable information and give you the strength necessary to complete your quest.

The graphics and characters are big and colorful, which may lead you to believe that this game is child's play. But, you may be amazed at the intricacy of the puzzles and plot twists that you will encounter before you unravel the whole evil story behind Biomecha, and rescue the fair princess. 6. SELLING US YOUR GAMES

Funco's success, in part, has been it's ability to help you stretch your gaming dollar by purchasing games you no longer play. To this end, we try to be as fair as possible. Prices are merely a function of supply and demand, much like gasoline pricing. Unfortunately, video game pricing is almost as unstable as gas, so the prices listed in the first column to the right of each title on pages thirty-one through thirty-four are merely the Suggested Value of what we would pay you at the time this magazine went to press. Prices will change; some go up, but most will go down over time.

Asteroids: The Arcade Classic Now Follows You Home!

If you're in the mood to feel nostalgic, Accolade has just the cart to help you with the journey down memory lane. It's quite possible that your first taste of the video game craze stemmed from some dimly lit arcade, the local bowling alley or skating rink. Then chances are one of the first coin-ops to gobble your quarters was Asteroids. You remember, it was right there next to PacMan, Donkey Kong, Space Invaders and the pinball machines. If you find yourself yearning for those good ole' days, wait no more. Finally the classic trip through the astro belt has been brought to your Game Boy.

And what a perfect place for this space shooter to call home. The plot, the graphics and the sound track are pure and uncomplicated; tailor-made for the limitations of Game Boy. You'll be too busy to miss any of the color or stereo sound.

It's your mission to return home safely, but first you must travel through this pesky astro belt. And, if those outtathis-world boulders aren't enough to deal with, you'll have to fight off the occasional flying saucers speeding in your direction. You'll accomplish this by some quick thinking and careful aiming of your photon cannon, which shoots between one and four shots at a time. Otherwise, you're destined to become cosmic dust.

The game begins with two, four or six large asteroids racing towards you, depending on which level of difficulty you select. As you hit the menacing meteors, large asteroids become medium sized, medium sized become small, and small asteroids disappear. But don't forget to keep a watch over your shoulder for little green men in their flying machines.

Once you've completely cleared a screen you'll progress to the next stage, where the number of asteroids and the speed of their onslaught increases. If you find yourself in a real jam just hit your hyperspace button and you'll be warped to a random area of space. But be careful. You may find yourself in an even more harrowing predicament.

If you are lucky enough to own a Video Link cable for your Game Boy and an extra unit, grab a friend and try out the two-player modes. Enter into Competition Play, where you'll race against time, and your buddy, to blast the boulders. However, players will be vulnerable to attacks from their partner's ships. Or choose to work together in the Team Play mode. Partners will share extra lives and not be able to attack each other in this joint effort.

Asteroids is fast-paced, straight foreword action. It's a must for gamers that had spent lots of quarter burning hours with the arcade original. Space shooing fans have just one question: What took them so long?

Shoot big hunks of rock and avoid running into Concept: them. Companies should stick to bringing these simple, but classic titles to Game Boy. This is where these titles are fun. Graphics & Animation: The Asteroids coin-op game was never this good. And they even brought the original music back, too! Sound: Playability: Blasting asteroids at high speed, then hyperspace at warp speed to avoid exploding into oblivion. Easy

Blow those meteors out of the sky.

Galaxy Force II: Sometime In The Distant Future, In A Galaxy Light Years Away . . .

If you spend your spare time sinking quarters into the serious shooting arcade titles, than you already know the plot. But thanks to Sega, the rest of you will get to experience the high energy coin-op favorite, Galaxy Force II.

You are a star fighter in the Galaxy Force of the Junos people. The evil Rounth Empire has been tearing its way through the galaxy, destroying and imprisoning star systems along the way; crushing all who try to impede them. The task that awaits you is no easy one. It is your job to seek and destroy the enemy forces, one at a time, and save your colonies in the Junos system.

Like its arcade counterpart, this is a straight-forward space shooter cart. There are six levels of play, but you may select which level you wish to start in during the scene select screen. Once you have defeated that level, you will automatically advance to the next level of play. It has also been designed as a single player game, so use this opportunity to sharpen your aiming and flying skills. Your life span is dependent upon the amount of energy you retain. You will lose energy as you go into battle and take hits, but this can be restored when you have racked up enough points or destroyed a certain amount of enemy fighters.

You have been equipped with the most advanced flyer that Junos' technology can provide. Select from artillery such as rapid fire cannons and homing missiles. The missiles will prove to be your best weapon, as you can control the number released at one time. Once you have locked on to multiple targets, just let 'er rip! You also have been provided with a defensive shield that surrounds your craft. Be aware that it will weaken as your ship absorbs enemy blows and, once it is destroyed it's like open season on your ship.

The coin-op version became such a hit due to the intense, intergalactic graphics. Some of those same scenes are found here on the home edition, sans a bit of the detail. But don't spend too much of your time star gazing or the evil Empire will sneak up on you. Most of the battle is carried out in outer space. However, the backdrop changes as you move into the lower atmosphere of your world or planetary corridors that look like something right off the "Star Wars" drawing board. These corridors provide more that a change of scenery, though. Their tight corners and narrowing passages will challenge even the most agile flyer, so heed the directions of your computer co-pilot.

Enemies will besiege you from every angle, on every level. They range from small, single fighters to enormous battle cruisers. And, just like any good game should, Galaxy Force II has saved the best for last. If you are successful in defeating the enemies in levels one through five, you will warp into hyperspace for even faster action. A keen eye is a must on this level because the Empire's crafts blend right into the background. This camouflage makes it tough going, whether you are under attack or moving in offensively.

If you're looking for some fast-action, finger-popping fun that's out of this world, save your quarters and seek out Galaxy Force II for the Genesis system.

It's a basic concept with Playability: basic game play. Entertainment Value: This game is not made to hold your attention with a lot of different action; it's pretty much the same through and through. The spaceship looks like something from Star Wars. The scrolling is basic left to right with simple forward movement. It would have been more challenging if they would have added multi-

"EDUTAINMENT" GAMES: PRIME EXAMPLES THAT LEARNING REALLY CAN BE FUN!

by Elizabeth Olson

I'm not sure where or when the idea first started but, somewhere along the line, we got the idea that things that are good for us aren't any fun or taste bad. Just look at today's TV commercials. More that one cereal asks consumers to overlook the fact that the cereal is nutritious; that they should eat it anyway because it tastes good. Working out and exercise has long taken a bad rap, and heaven help the kid who lets it slip that they actually enjoy vegetables or school!

The same myth has plagued the video game industry. If a game was nonviolent and actually possessed some educational merit, it was like assigning it the kiss of death. This may have be true in the past, but with the recent increase of computer game carry-overs and innovative carts popping up on the market, it's a myth that's sure to be dispelled in a hurry.

We took just a small sampling of the growing "Edutainment" category and were pleasantly surprised by what we found. There are titles for the youngest of gamers to help them develop reading and counting skills in a fun format. There are adventure games for school age players that teach history and geography so brilliantly that you would hardly think it was work. And there are a host of puzzle and strategy carts out there that will keep even the experienced gamers on their toes for hours.

Two of the most recent games that fall into this category are reviewed in this issue. Lemmings is the popular PC hit now available for the SNES, that teaches you to think fast in order to save the lovable, little Lemmings (see pages 6-7). Sega Genesis introduces Art Alive, an introductory PC graphics style program that brings out the artist in any player (pages 44-45). While we didn't have room to look at all of them, here is an all-too brief look at some of the best edutainment carts currently available for various video game systems:

Gametek's Fisher Price Series

Fisher Price is a name synonymous with kids and kids' toys. Gametek brings that name to the video game world. I Can Remember, is a popular recall/recognition game, based on the classic board game. Perfect Fit is a title that strengthens hand/eye coordination.

Firehouse Rescue is just the newest in the Fisher Price line-up. Firehouse Rescue is perfect for the little firefighter in your family. They control brightly colored firetrucks through street mazes to the scene of the fire, where they rescue the Little People™. The whole time, they'll be learning recognition, similarities and differences, while increasing memory and coordination. These Nintendo carts are recommended for gamers age three to eight.

Hi-Tech's Sesame Street Series

A common question asked of video game retailers is "What can I get for the youngest members of my Family?"

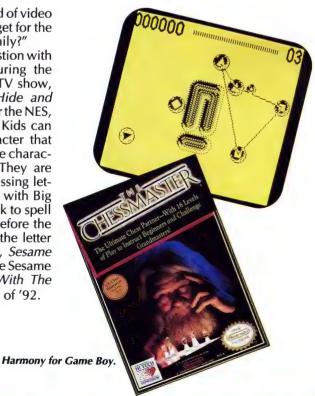

Hi-Tech answers that question with several Nintendo titles featuring the characters from the popular TV show, Sesame Street. Big Bird's Hide and Speak, the first talking game for the NES, is actually six games in one. Kids can find the Sesame Street character that matches the name or locate the character hiding along the street. They are asked to match or find the missing letters, as well as making words with Big Bird or racing against the clock to spell as many words as they can before the sun sets. Similar in format is the letter and number recognition title, Sesame Street ABC and 123. New to the Sesame Street series is Countdown With The Count, available in the Spring of '92.

Popular Board Games/Game Shows For Your Video System

Parker Bros. proves that the most popular board game in history can also be a smash success as a video game. Monopoly was introduced to the Nintendo system in the Summer of 1991, complete with the top hat and Park Place. It will be available for the Game Boy in early 1992. It joins the likes of other board games like Trivial Pursuit, Pictionary and Win, Lose or Draw in the recent surge of carry-overs, that are perfect for an evening of play with family or friends.

And, if TV game shows keep you glued to the tube, there are several available to play anytime, day or night. Gametek has brought many of the leading ratings grabbers to the video game format, such as Wheel of Fortune, Jeopardy and the new, Super Talking Jeopardy, featuring questions tough enough to keep any scholar guessing.

lust as Lemmings hopes to successfully make the cross over, so does Konami's newest Nintendo offering, Where in Time is Carmen Sandiego? This title was so popular on the IBM and Amiga PCs, that it even earned its own television show. As a recruit for the Acme Detective Agency it's your job to track down Carmen Sandeigo and her criminal cohorts across the globe in order to recover the historical treasures they have a habit of making off with. This cart will take you through time and space, teaching History and Geography along the way. It comes with its own encyclopedia. Electronic Arts will be bringing it to Genesis in early '92.

Chessmaster, another favorite PC title, has also found its way across the formats. Hi-Tech Expressions first brought Chessmaster to the 8-bit Nintendo and the Game Boy, where it quickly became the best selling chess cart. Now Mindscape brings Chessmaster's more than 150,000 openings, 16 levels of play and challenge to the Super NES system.

Something Along

A Different Note

You've seen it in the television commercials, but you really must see it in person to believe it. It's the Miracle Piano Teaching System for the Nintendo, SNES, Amiga and PC compatibles. Mindscape, in conjunction with Software Toolworks, brings this innovative music teaching system into your home. You'll learn how to sit, how to place your fingers, and how to read music. There are 128 different instrument sounds and effects to choose from, an on-screen tutorial and an interactive, shooting gallery game for those particularly boring lesson plans.

Puzzlers
That Will Keep You Guessing

Tetris has long been a favorite title among adult games. There's just something addictive about those falling blocks! Other games along the same vein have proved to be surefire winners among video enthusiasts with a taste for strategy. The ancient, eastern game of Ishido: The Way of the Stones from Accolade blends the Tao "Rule of Four" with classic board maneuvering for hours of thought-provoking play. Get it for your Nintendo, Game Boy or Genesis system. Similarly, their Game Boy title, Harmony is a study in meditation-like puzzle raveling; dissolving like-shapes into a peaceful state of 'Synergy'.

The Sky's The Limit With Art Alive!

Just a touch more blue over here. Shade this area a bit. Easy does it with that spray can! Very impressionistic; or would that be post-modern? Wow! What a masterpiece. Art Alive: Picasso meets video technology in this new cart from Sega.

If you've ever wanted to try your hand at computer style graphics, here's your chance. Imagine introductory graphics programs such as MacDraw or MacPaint transferred to your Genesis system.

You'll find everything here that you'll find on your PC. There is a full palette of colors that can be used as your line colors or to fill in any space. There are several patterns to choose from, or make up your own. Use the pencil, paint brush, erasers, or the clip and paste features. You can make circles, squares, or even freehand. And if you wish to fill your screen with the same design, simply use the repeat feature.

If coloring books are more to your liking, Sega has provided several predrawn backgrounds ranging from space scenes to landscape to interior settings. Fill them in any way you like. You can alter the backgrounds with the pencil feature. You can even select items or characters from the library of clip art and animate them across your finished piece. And if you're feeling really ambitious, you can hook up your VCR and create your own cartoons.

This cart will really challenge your imagination. Once you have mastered the controls, the sky is the limit. Sega knows that there is a budding artist in all of us, and Art Alive will give you the tools to bring your Picasso to the surface.

Project Space Shuttle: Do You Have The Right Stuff?

From the earliest rocket launching to Sputnik, we have always been fascinated with the idea of space travel and exploration. The whole world cheered as Neil Armstrong planted man's first steps on the moon. And it fell silent as it watched the disaster of the Challenger space shuttle.

It was predicted that someday we would use the space shuttle as commonly as we use air travel today, exploring new and distant galaxies with the possibilities of supporting life elsewhere in the universe. Every science fiction writer had a book or film out portraying the colonization of our species in outer space. Now, thanks to Project Space Shuttle, it is possible for you to take "... one giant step for mankind". This new title from Absolute Entertainment makes it possible for you to try your wings as pilot of these incredible space crafts of the future.

Just when you thought there was nothing really new for your Nintendo system, Project Space Shuttle comes along and gives you a startlingly realistic peek at what true space travel is like. This is not the typical space shooter you might expect, but a series of six missions that range from building a space station to rescuing Russia's stranded Cosmonaut. And while at first glance this game may seem to be geared for the younger crowd, don't be fooled. It will take a great deal of patience, skill and practice to advance to your next mission and return home safely to Edwards Air Force Base.

You begin your career by entering your security code. We advise you to write these down somewhere as you will need them to progress to higher missions. Select from numerous crafts like the Discover or Voyager. Your first mission is to successfully prepare the craft for launch and load your crew. From there your tasks become more difficult as you experience take off and must leave the Earth's atmosphere and invert the shuttle. From there you must disengage the launch rockets and proceed with your orbit of the Earth. All of these tasks are completed by careful timing and a practiced hand at the thrust controls. It will take some time to get a good feel for all the levels you must be

The major cities of the world are under attack and it's your job to save them. Not an easy task. It's just you and your two anti-missile silos against a barrage of incoming missiles, satellites, planes and smart bombs.

Missile Command is pure arcadeblasting fun. It dates back to the days of Space Invaders, when the best arcade games were made up of great strategy and a quick trigger finger. Now this classic finds a new home on your Game Boy, courtesy of Accolade.

You start out defending Cairo, Egypt. If you succeed in protecting your city and its districts through the first attack, you will have to defend it through another. If you are successful the second time, you will find yourself protecting a new city. There are sixteen actual cities in all, including London, Paris, Moscow, Sydney, San Francisco and New York, complete with the Statue of Liberty. Survive the first tour of the world and you'll be asked to defend them again, but this time the stakes are higher. Fail in your mission and it's "Game Over" for you.

There are six districts to protect in each city, represented by a skyscraper. You will receive bonus points for each building left standing at the end of each round. You will also be awarded an additional district each time you accumulate 10,000 points. However, you will only be allowed six districts in any one round.

Each anti-missile silo can fire a total of fifteen shots, so plan your shots well. The number of shots remaining is demonstrated by the number inside each silo. An alarm will sound when you only have three shots left in a given silo. Remember, the silos are also vulnerable to attack, so be sure to protect them.

In the first round of play, expect an onslaught of missile attacks from an unknown source. You must destroy them before they reach the ground. Each missile destroyed is worth 25 points. Once you reach the second round of play, satellites and planes will be added to the action. They drop their artillery closer to the ground and you'll have less time to react. You'll have to demolish them in order to put a stop to their attacks and to capture yourself an additional 100 points. Finally, the third round brings on the smart bombs, which pose a much greater challenge. Destroying one of these earns you 250 points. The number of points earned is multiplied each time you progress to a higher level of difficulty.

So, you think you've mastered this game? Try it against a friend in the two-player mode. Both players share the same Game Boy, but retain their own set of numbers. If you rank up there with the highest points earned, your score will be recorded right along with the best of them.

Missile Command will test your agility, your strategy and most of all, the speed of your trigger finger. If classic shooter action is what you seek, pick up Missile Command from Accolade.

A LOOK TO THE FUTURE OF VIDEO PLAY

Those of you who recently bought new Sega Genesis decks may be experiencing a little technical difficulty. If you are a fan of the early Electronics Arts classics, you've probably discovered that the titles Populous, Zany Golf and Budokan won't work on the Genesis decks that come with Sonic the Hedgehog enclosed. This is due to minor improvements that Sega has made on their system. These improvements alter the way the hardware reads the cart. If you are experiencing this problem, Electronic Arts suggests that you call their Customer Warranty Number: (415) 572-2787.

system reads two "scratch pad" chips inside each cart. These chips control the memory and visual features of the game. By altering the way the deck reads these chips the strength, number of lives, invincibility, etc., can be changed to give your characters "super powers".

As with the Nintendo version, Galoobwill market the Genie in the U.S. and Camerica will distribute it in Canada. But unlike the Nintendo/Galoob/Camerica legal entanglements that kept gamers waiting for the Genie, Sega of America has given the product their blessing.

Another note along the same line: Ballistic, the Genesis division of Accolade has verified that the Genesis carts Onslaught and Ishido: Way of the Stones may or may not function properly on the updated version of the Genesis deck. For further information call their Technical Support Division at (408) 296-8400.

An update on the bad blood between Nintendo of America and Camerica: Nintendo attempted to make life a bit tougher for non-licensed developers of Nintendo-compatible game carts by adding a lock-out chip to the new edition of the Nintendo Entertainment System. This chip more successfully blocks out unauthorized software.

Always up to something new, Camerica found a way to dance around this new chip and create totally compatible carts by adding a switch to all of its new titles. This enables any of their games to be played on older or new Nintendo decks, just with the flip of a switch.

Visitors to the Consumer Electronics Show in Vegas saw more than a new game while playing Super NES carts. The booths were full of a multi-buttoned controller that look like a fancy Super Famicom controller. Introducing the Asciipad, new for the Super Nintendo Galoob Toys and Camerica are out to grant wishes for Sega devotees. They unveiled a Game Genie for use with the Genesis system at the CES show. LucusFilm Games has some projects in the works that may change the way you look at the CD ROM for your PC. They have developed the concept of more interactive programing based on the player's decisions and selections.

Introducing iMUSE, which stands for Interactive Music and Sound Effects. This revolutionary sound system actually composes the sound track as you go, allowing the music and sound effect to respond to the player's choices. This new way of looking at game sound is created by the Skywalker Sound division of LucasFilm.

The first game to take advantage of iMUSE is Monkey Island 2: LeChuck's Revenge. Various sections of the game are represented by a theme, but as you move to different areas of that section, the theme changes slightly to reflect the mood of the setting. The sound is also changed by the nature of your interaction with other characters. For example, if Guybush is feeling romantic, the tenor saxophone takes over. But if he sticks his foot in his mouth, prepare to be rebuffed by a cranky guitar.

Another example of iMUSE can be found in Indiana Jones and the Fate of Atlantis, an original Indy adventure created for LucasFilm Games. This is the most complex game the licensee has created to date, featuring over 200 rooms, video rotoscoping, increased player sensitivity and the interactive sound system. Both Monkey Island 2 and Fate of Atlantis will be available for IBM, with Amiga and CD-ROM conversions in the works. Might these games show up next on the long awaited CD-ROM for Sega?

And, you won't have to wait four years.

Winter Challenge offers you eight of the most popular events of the Winter Olympics, including the Luge, Bobsledding, Speed Skating, the Giant Slalom and more. Measure your skills against nine other computerized competitors. Or create opponents of your own, complete with their names, faces and the flag of the country they represent.

You can begin by selecting either the training or the tournament mode for any event. You will be given a brief history of each event, a review of the controls and the standing records. If you are in training, aim for that record. If you are in tournament play, the computer will give you all of your opponents' scores and stats. Be sure to pay close attention to the number and type of medals they've received, so you know who you're up against. If things get a little tough or aren't quite challenging enough, there are three levels of difficulty to select from; Amateur, Professional and World Class.

Winter Challenge has a unique feature that you won't find at the Olympics. Let's say that you're really deep in tournament play, but you have to stop. Just hit the 'store tournament' option and it will be saved until the next time you pop in the cart. If you wish to start a new tournament without losing the one you have in progress, there is a password feature that enables you to store limitless tournaments for later play. And, it will keep your standings on file.

And then there's the real fun of the game, the events themselves. 'Downhill Skiing' is the most popular and dangerous form of Alpine skiing. It's your job to guide your skier down the face of a mountain, past the flagged gates, at breathtaking speed for the fastest time. The 'Giant Slalom' challenges you with a maze of 41 gates, bumps, ditches and curves. It takes a keen eye and the swift grace of a panther to complete this run in the fastest time. And, if heights give you a thrill, the 'Ski Jump' is your event. Race down the iced ramp, hurling your body into the air to soar like a bird or fall to earth. Balance and, more than, a little good luck are necessary to make the longest jump.

If stamina is more your thing, try 'Cross Country Skiing'. Despite what you might think, this is no pushover event. Keep a close eye on your energy bar to see if you've got what it takes. And if you think you're coordinated enough to handle two sports at once, there is the 'Biathlon'; skiing twenty kilometers and stopping four times to fire at targets. This sport requires both incredible strength and expert marksmanship.

So you say your skis are in the shop? Never fear, there's always 'Speed Skating'. It's just three laps on a 400 meter track of ice on little metal blades that taper down to 1/32 of an inch wide. No problem, right? Strength, grace, balance and the speed of light will be the necessary skills here. And if mind-boggling speed is what you seek, try the 'Bobsled'. You and a teammate become a human rocket, racing down a concrete and ice track that snakes down the face of the mountain for 1500 meters. You're out of control as you zip through turns at speeds over 75 miles per hour. If you don't have a teammate crazy enough to hurl himself down the mountain, there's the 'Luge': just you on a tiny sled, speeding feet first, on your back, down a winding track full of ice at speeds up to sixty

Concept:

The game is your standard Winter Sports, Track & Field type action. It's the same old, same old, but it's a newcomer to the Genesis.

Graphics

Sound:

& Animation: Most of the events look the same, but that could be because they all involve snow. The animation is kind of choppy, but the crashes are great.

Yes, it has skiing noises! However, it's not a lot to get excited about.

Playability: The events are a bit difficult to control at first but, in 5 time, you will learn to master them.

Entertainment

Graphics

& Animation: Stunning graphics - particularly the animation of 7.5

higher marks.

Sound: 7 The sound effects stand out crystal clear; about as realistic as they could make it.

Playability: While it is easy to control, the game tends to drag a little bit.

Entertainment

Winter Games is fun to play and easy on the eyes. But it tends to be slightly repetitive and might get tiresome a little sooner than you'd like. While it's inarguably a fun game, I'd like to see variety in the action to match the incredible audio and visual.

Concept: With all the different games available for Genesis, it's surprising that there aren't many that give you the variety in one cart as Winter Challenge. I think this game was well needed.

Graphics & Animation: 9

Whether you are skiing down the hill or going for the gold as you race around the rink on speed skates, the action and scenery are as exciting to watch as the sports you are participating in.

Sound: 8 The background music is pretty basic, but the event sounds are great! You can hear everything from the snow fly as you ski down the hill the to the bullets in the biathlon. And don't get too cocky; if you mess up the crowd will either 'boo' or 'aahh' at you.

Playability: 8 The characters are easy to control on most of the courses and events. However, if you're like me, it will take a couple of tries to perfect your form and method.

Entertainment Value:

It is nice to see games coming out like Winter Challenge; those that are not stuck in the rut of being a shooter or adventure. This is a great sports simulation cart and I will be adding it to my library of Sega Genesis games.

Turrican: The Armored Ally That Fits In Your Back Pocket!

"Long ago in a nearby galaxy..." Stop me if you've heard this one. There once was a land known as Alterra, a completely man-made lifeworld. Alterra was comprised of four colonies, each a separate bio-engineered habitat created to serve a different function for the citizens of Alterra.

This world was maintained by a powerful ecosystem generation network known as a Multiple Organism Unit Link, nicknamed MORGAL for short. Early colonists used MORGAL to mutate Alterra inhabitants in order to best perform their duties.

Unfortunately, a massive earthquake destroyed all interface functions and communications with MORGAL. which reacted by further altering selected creatures to destroy the people of Alterra.

Very few colonists lived to tell the tale of the higher intelligence malfunction and rebellion. Repeated attempts to return and reclaim Alterra failed. That is until now. The advances in the area of genetic science technology have paved the way for a new mutant warrior. The result; RoboCop with an attitude. Make way for Turrican.

This biogenetic saviour from Accolade made his debut last Fall on your Genesis system. Now he journeys to your Game Boy. Everything but the dramatic colors are here, including the same powerful bosses and Turrican's collection of weapons.

First you'll have to put up with the pesky drone found on every level. As you search the four sections of Alterra, you will find seven huge bosses at outposts throughout the world. You'll meet up with the Gauntlet, the remains of a transforming robot that once made farming land out of mountains. This time Turrican is his target. Dead Head is the processing center of a construction robot that just hates intruders trespassing in his building site. You'll also go face-to-face with, or a facsimile thereof, Mother Fish, Trash Master, Monolith and Queen Mother, the breeder of the insect world. If Turrican can survive this onslaught, he must prepare to do battle with the three faces of MORGUL. Three faces means three brains, so this one will be a "doosie".

To help our robotic warrior in his mission, he has a variety of weapons to choose from. His basic Laser Gun can be altered by collecting crystals and tokens. Or, clear the area around you with the laser Lightening Whip. Turrican throws a mighty Power Line that zaps enemies with an ionizing bolt, or devastating Grenades and Mines. When things get really ugly, Turrican can turn into a Buzzsaw three times in a life. This guy can be a real cut-up!

If you liked the original, and enjoy Turrican on the go, stay tuned. Turrican is headed for your Nintendo and a second installment is in the works for Sega Genesis.

Dear Game Informer (continued):

First of all, I would like to have more pages in your magazine. I think you should have more tips and I would like to see more sports games like RBI Baseball, Super Tecmo Bowl, Tennis, Volleyball, Track & Field I and II, etc... I hope that for the January issue of the magazine you will put the team that wins the Super Bowl on the cover.

Daryl Post Irving, NY

Daryl, you will be happy to see that we have twice as many pages and double the number of tips in this issue. Inside you'll find The Games: Winter Challenge, Joe Montana 2 and John Madden '92. The March/April issue will feature a section on the newest golf games available for different formats. We saw guite a few new sports carts in the works at CES and we'll be sure to bring you coverage on them as they are released. Sorry that we weren't able to put the Super Bowl champs on the cover. The magazine goes to production before the game is played. However, the Super Bowl is being played here in Minneapolis, so we'll be sure to watch it. Thank you for your suggestions! - Ed.

Someone told me about your magazine the other day. I have looked everywhere for it and just can't seem to find it anywhere. Could you please send me some information on where to get it and how to subscribe. Thank you for all your help. It is greatly appreciated.

Keela Hawk Killeen, TX

Keela, Game Informer is not on the newsstand at this time. You may purchase a copy or a subscription either by writing or calling Funco at (612) 533-8118, or in any of their FuncoLand retail locations. Currently, they are located in the Minneapolis/St. Paul area, but hope to expand into other areas soon. You will also find information on how to subscribe in this issue. - Ed.

I am writing to ask why you do not include the Turbo Grafix 16 game system in your publication. I personally own a TG-16 system, as well as a Game Boy, NES and SNES. I realize that the Genesis and Nintendo systems have more titles available, but that can't be a good reason to leave out this great system. The games I have played on my TG-16 were not only visually appealing, but sound great and play hard.

I would also like to mention that NEC's TG-16 is the only system right now that has CD-ROM games available for use with a CD-Rom system in the USA. The titles available are educational, exciting and have been on the market for at least a year. Please let me know why you have failed to include them in your publication. I feel that you are missing a large part of the video game population out there. Sincerely, a proud but somewhat disgruntled TG-16 owner.

Clifford Perrington San Antonio, TX

I was looking through your magazine and noticed that you don't sell any Turbo Graphix-16 stuff. How come? Is the Turbo so low in ranking that no one can sell them anymore? Don't get me wrong, the Game Informer is a great magazine. But could you please do some Turbo coverage?

Michael Williams Lane, SC

I think your magazine is great! From the updates to the reviews, this magazine has it all! I am a proud owner of an Atari Lynx portable game system but, unfortunately, I can't find many cheap places to buy their products. I bet a lot of Lynx gamers would appreciate it if Funco started buying and selling Lynx products, and Game Informer started covering them. Keep up the good work!

Ian Gazarek Seattle, WA

We do not mean to slight the Turbo Grafix and Lynx owners out there. As a new publication, we still have a limited number of pages and staff. We felt it better to focus in on a few systems. Both are good systems with loyal followings. We hope to introduce coverage of Lynx and TG-16 in Tech Talk and What's Hot! in the future - Ed.

I am writing about the Super Mario Bros. 3 Tip printed on page 24 of the Nov/Dec. Game Informer. I have tried it four times and it doesn't work!

> Robyn Russell Norman, OK

We received quite a few letters regarding that tip. There was a misprint. It was supposed to read invincible, not invisible. The tip will give you invincibility, but it is difficult to do on the first try. We have had many readers tell us they can become invisible, but we have yet to successfully do so. Sorry for the confusion! - Ed.
